BELTS

GIRTH BELT

A girth belt is a wide belt made of cordage or leather strips, typically worn beneath another belt.

Cordage or woven leather can be worn over the sash and is usually under the gunbelt

HOLSTER BELT

This belt may be made of leather, nylon, or faux leather. It may hold the blaster holster and carry additional pouches.

Nylon

Worn around the waist or the hips

AMMO BELT

An ammo belt carries additional munitions. It may serve as the required belt item on its own or be worn above a holster belt when both are used. It may be made of leather, nylon, or faux leather.

No more than a 1-2" gap between the highest point of the holster belt and the ammo belt.

TALL BACKING BELT

A tall backing belt made of leather or another durable material, with a second belt overlapping it. These belts are often 3-5 in wide.

Backing belt supporting the gun belt

CUSTOM BELT OPTIONS

All additional belts must be within 1-2in (2.5-5cm) from the upper belt at their highest point

Modern tactical gear must be modified so it no longer looks off the shelf.

Metal and metal plated belts are typically seen on Later Crusader Era Kits

Bandoleers are not waist items as they are not worn around the waist or hips

